RE:

Maternity Leave

Date:

March 14, 1995

Currently, I am working more than full time to get the Production Services Department up and running. I hope to have put together enough resources and organization before the end of May to insure that the department is running smoothly and systems are in place. There is a great deal of work to be done before this time as we all know.

Here is my game plan:

My official due date is June 7th. You gentlemen who have kids know this is an arbitrary date and we are really talking about a span of 2 weeks before that to 2 weeks after that if all goes well.

I plan to work up until the baby is born, let's say that is June 7th (11 weeks from now). When the baby is born, I will take 6 weeks off which brings us to July 18. After this time I will begin work part time for the next 6 weeks, which brings us to the end of August. I plan to be back at work full time by the beginning of September.

When I do start to work again, I plan to come into the office as well as do work from my home. The time that I am working on site at WAIS, I will be bringing the baby with me for the first few months.
